

Abstract

The invention relates to the determination of the relative germination vigour and/or the storage capability of a seed batch by means of quantification of L-isoaspartyl methyltransferase. The invention further relates to antibodies permitting the quantification of L-isoaspartyl methyltransferase.